Dear Kathleen,

Good afternoon, my name is Neelima. I am a flinders uni student studing in last semester. In my opinion, The tertiary education should be in english speaking country to provide good care to people.As,the nurses gradute from countries like Australia come to know all the competencies that should be used to cure the patient and the diffent rules that are used here to look after people especially during the placement

English is one of the requirement for better care for people but many nurses those who are graduate from reputed university like flinders uni. Students who will graduate or who graduated their level of english is already good enough beacause they have passed their examinations and assignments in english.Hence,students who passed their nursing from english speaking countries such as Australia they donot require IELTS because the student must be failed during the examination if they are not competent or cannot speak proper english

during their placements

regards

Neelima
