I would like to make a comment about the IELTS test for the international nurses who has not finished their high school or secondary in English. It is unfair for the people who will be finished their nursing/ midwifery degree here in Australia and then they need to sit on the IELTS exam again to get a 7 scores for their registration. It's making hard for the international students to spend more money on it. We are paying higher tuition fees and then finally we are finishing the degree and passed all the qualifications from the University but cannot get the registration and cannot get a job. I'd like the Nursing and Midwifery Board to reconsider about it.

Thank you somuch
